

Fall: Time to install your grassland plantings!

Second workshop in series of two (Part 1: Restoration and Revegetation, July 21, 2017)

Field Practices: Hands-On Restoration, Implementation and Maintenance

October 20, 2017 – 8:00 am to 4:30 pm (Check in 7:45am); Rainy-day make-up, Oct 27
UC Davis Putah Creek Reserve, Davis

Fees: $155/CNGA Members, $180/Non-members, $95/Students w ID

Following the Nuts and Bolts of Restoration and Revegetation workshop we held earlier this year, this outdoor workshop will show attendees how to do site preparation, implementation, and maintenance for their grasslands restoration projects. Attendees will work with a range of equipment for tilling, seeding and maintenance and will learn how to calibrate various seeding implements. If time and weather allow, instructors may conduct a small burn as well as a short visit to an existing grassland at the end of the day.

Experienced experts will cover topics including:

- Soil Preparation, including morning talk by UC Davis Soil Scientist Vic Claassen
- Seed selection, with native grass seed samples
- Grass plug planting
- Seed drilling with Truax drills
- Broadcast seeding
- Maintenance: mowing, grazing, burning, spraying, etc.

Note: This workshop focuses on small to large scale restoration projects. It does not focus on landscape design, implementation and maintenance.

Registration fee includes morning refreshments and workshop materials. Bring your own lunch or pre-order through CNGA.

Instructors: Vic Claassen (UC Davis), JP Marié (U.C. Davis Putah Creek Riparian Reserve), Chris Rose (Solano Resource Conservation District), and Bryan Young (Sacramento Regional County Sanitation District).
